"College park is a funny kind of town. It's kinda like a growth on the University. You would think that a community with a population the size of College Park would be larger than just one strip of Rt. I."

"I commute to school, and I was a Junior before I knew there was a College Park."

COLLEGE PARK, MARYLAND

"The people who own shops in College Park fall into the same types as any other town. Some people are there just to grab your money and could care less about helping you. Others are so friendly that it's a pleasure to go in the shop."

College Park

The smoke-filled carloads of men cruise by all week but Saturday night is always the best. Eyes at leg level, they miss the shrouded steeple signalling above the neon signs. Miss the littered gutters, stale popcorn and bookstore specials. Only the legs. They don't miss the Grill. Faces and legs there. Construction workers and students—The Greening of America—looking for a taste of something a little stronger than Bud. Put a few under your belt and go after those 'loose college women' everybody in Laurel's talking about. Maybe find some, probably not, then head on down to D.C. to get better at more of the same, hopefully not coming back the same way.

PAUL NEWMAN.

"The Orientation Program has reached a successful conclusion . . . We were able to orient approximately 6,000 students during this span of time . . . Your assistance was both greatly appreciated and invaluable . . ."

Six thousand freshmen? Were there that many? And then again there seem to have been myriad more. Like the proverbial drowning man the whole summer began to flash before my eyes, and I could see them all, pouring into the Student Union in endless droves of highrise pants and confused faces. Some looked defiantly bored and some downright scared. All clutched the traditional red and white "Welcome to Maryland" folders in their sweaty hands.

For I was one of the Chosen, the Best and the Brightest this place had to offer, an Orientation Group Leader for the University of Maryland.

Those first weeks my heart warmed at the sight of these lost souls. Fired with the missionary zeal two weeks of training had instilled I couldn't wait to gather the dear lambs into the flock and make them feel that UM was home away from home.

By mid-summer my dining hall breakfast turned in my stomach as I pinned on my name tag, gritted my teeth and braced myself to go through the whole shtick another time. And smile, kid! They're waiting for you out there!

The commuter lounge, where registration was done, must have looked like the aftermath of Little Big Horn. Bodies of kids sprawled on the floor trying to figure out their schedules were strewn all over.

The group leaders were supposed to scatter about and make themselves useful. I usually brought my boredom rug with me to pass time (a rug I started hooking and work on only when bored). Four hours of sitting and answering the same questions in an over-airconditioned room may not be quite hell, but close to it.

Yet there were times when I'd talk to kids and I'd see a fear in them that I remembered feeling when I was in their shoes. And I wanted to reassure them, let them know it was all going to be all right. They would adjust and find their niche here. When I finished talking and they looked more confident and smiled and said, "Thank you," I'd feel a little glowy and a little silly for feeling glowy and I'd feel perhaps I was doing something worthwhile after all.

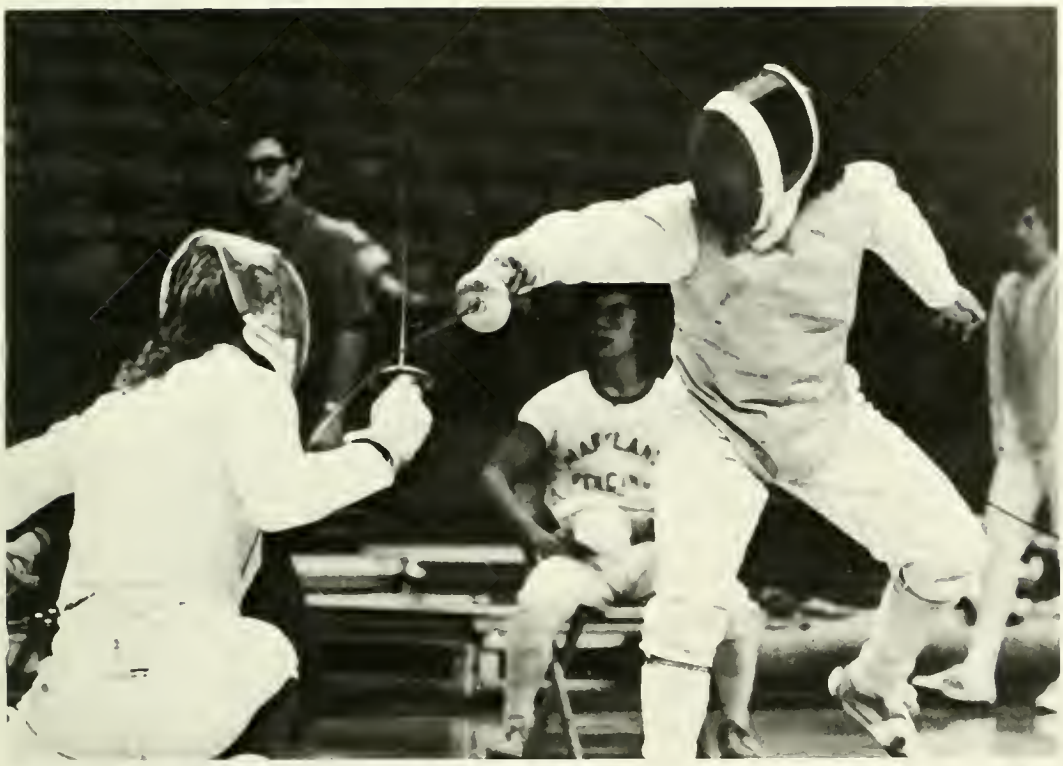
In but its third year of existence, the Terrapin fencing team is evolving into a yearly contender for the Atlantic Coast Conference title.

Formed the year after Maryland had lost the Carmichael Cup by one point, it took head coach Robert Tyler time to build a winning program. This year, the Terp fencers achieved that goal.

Victories were recorded for the first time over North Carolina State and ACC powerhouse North Carolina. The latter meet was not decided until the final bout in foil, a come-from-behind win for Ken Poyd.

Several area schools fell victims to the Terrapins, including the UMBC Retrievers, the Patriots of George Mason, and the Navy JV. Maryland's only loss against area competition came at the hands of Johns Hopkins in a close 15-12 meet.



Sully Krouse's wrestling Terps recorded another winning season in 1973-74 against what Krouse called "the toughest schedule in Maryland wrestling history." Only eastern powers Buffalo, Lehigh, Navy, and Penn State inflicted losses upon them, but the Terps rolled over Pittsburgh 29-8.

Four wrestlers were the nucleus of the team: Steve Nickolas (118 pounds), David Strauss (150), Tyrone Neal (158), and Cy Jernigan (heavyweight). Each won at least 10 matches during the season.

Nickolaus could be counted on to give Maryland a quick dual meet lead; Strauss retained his 1972-73 ACC championship form; Neal, a junior college transfer, proved to be one of the nation's best 158-pounders; and Jernigan put the "pins" in the "Terrapins", including three in a quadrangular meet against North Carolina, American, and Virginia.

This quad meet proved to be the most important night of the regular season. Both the Tar Heels and Cavaliers came into Cole fieldhouse undefeated, and many thought the question of whether the rest of the Atlantic Coast Conference was catching up with Maryland would be answerwed that night.

The Terps met the challenge, defeating Carolina 31-9 and Virginia 21-15.

Not only did the winning remain unchanged, so did the campus's lack of interest in wrestling. Area high school meets could draw standing-room only crowds into 2500-seat gymnasiums, but at home Terp meets, visiting fans from Lehigh and Penn State outnumbered Maryland rooters.

"You never realize how much stuff you have till you have to start lugging it all to your room."

"Sure, there's a lot of sex and drugs in the dorms. Show me a university today where they say there's no sex and drugs, and I'll show you a bunch of image-conscious liars. And I couldn't begin to tell ya half the stuff that goes on in the dorms. But we wouldn't want to get the administration nervous, would we?"

PLAYBOY

QUOTE FROM OPEN LETTER WRITTEN TO STUDENTS BY WILLIA M. THOMAS, ACTING VICE CHANCELLOR:

The "nude running" incidents have placed the University community into a defensive and embarrassed posture. Strong reactions from many of you and from other citizens of our state project impressions that include; (1) that there is an apparent general acceptance of such behavior on the part of the campus community, and (2) that the University administration condones this kind of activity. Please be assured that neither of those impressions is correct."

"If it wasn't for the long lines, the inadequate facilities and the poor food, the dining hall would be fairly decent."

"I think the dining hall has improved this year. You can't expect complete changes overnight."

"The dining hall? I think it's worth what I pay for it."

"UMMM . . . Dining Hall Hamburgers"

FROM DIAMONDBACK COLUMN (JAN. 9, 1974) BY KIM KEISTER

"It can't happen here. That attitude toward campus busts was shattered this week with the arrests of 15 dormitory residents for dealing dope. Five others can expect the same.

Similar occurences have been common on smaller, more isolated campuses, but very rare on the gargantuan, more progressive institutions like the University of Michigan and Berkeley.

Now we know where we stand. It can happen here.

It's a weird situation that brought the great bust about. Thousands of people here indulge in dope in an atmosphere of acceptance and often advocation. At the same time we are governed by those who deem such activities evil and corruptive. This despite all recent research to the contrary.

Some blame has to be placed on both sides. Public comment must be reserved until the accused have their days in court. But it can not go without notice that so far three of the alleged drug dealers were victims of armed robberies this year.

Armed robberies are more than a nuisance to the victims' dormitory neighbors. Bullets have no eyes, and the often heavy traffic to a drug dealer's residence can also be less than a delight.

Many among the black community at the University were also irritated by the repeated reports of those big devilish gun-wielding black men descending on poor, innocent white boys and making off only with mom's apple pie and just enough change for a carton of milk. Who could believe such a thing?

Besides, a bust is one of those occupational hazards of the dealer which is paid for in the price of the pot. Growing and transporting an ounce of weed doesn't cost $15 to $25. The dealer makes his dough.

On the other hand, the absurdity of years in jail and stiff fines for being in business can only be laughed or cried at.

Nearly 100 per cent of the research on the "harmful effects" of marijuana has turned up no more evidence than smoking cigarettes. The alleged dealers are being hassled for what should be handled by cigarette machines.

They are being persecuted not for a disservice to society, but for the ignorance of malinformed politicians with their heads up their asses.

And this Chancellor Charles E. Bishop has endorsed. Last week he publicly stated the "duly enacted laws of our state" must be up-held on this campus. He also said if evidence is found against the accused, they will be disciplined by the campus judicial process . . . possibly to the degree of expellment.

Bishop said he expected two results from the bust. First, fewer armed robberies. Second, a "more wholesome environment."

Fewer armed robberies would definitely be nice. Everyone would agree to that. Dealing from dorms is not the most considerate way to make a fast buck. But was the bust the best way to decrease the intrusions?

A more wholesome environment? Ah, c'mon chancellor. Can't you just see the College Park Coca-Cola and pizza sales sky-rocketing now.

What the hell is a more wholesome environment? Presumably in the eyes of the chancellor it means less marijuana. As if the bust will have a significant effect on drug sales for more than an hour. Students will probably be running around trying to find new bananas and catnip, right?

No way. If your favorite dealer got busted there's always another to take his/her place. Maybe more seeds in the bag or smaller ounces, or at worst, a slightly higher price. But not that big of a problem.

What the bust means at most is it's time prohibition is ended. The duly enacted state law must be repealed."

"There are more diversions from studying than nude runs, robberies and drug busts. It's never dull."

"When we lost the first game I was disappointed. I thought we were going to have a losing team."

"Athletic Director James Kehoe has persisted in saying 'football must win for the athletic department to make money.'"

"The 1973 Terrapins are finally giving Kehoe some hope of getting the money he seeks."

WE'VE COME A LONG WAY BABY . . .

Women's basketball at Maryland is beginning to move up in the world. 1973's defending state champions changed their headquarters from tiny Preinkert fieldhouse to Ritchie coliseum and Cole fieldhouse, both of which have enough seating capacity to handle the games' ever-growing number of spectators.

Two Terps, 5-6 guard Monica Rogers and 6-1 center Laurie Donnelly, tried out for the men's basketball team to emphasize the financial plight of women's athletics. Nancy Scannell of the Washington Post wrote a feature article on the two in particular and the Maryland women's athletics situation in general. The article was inserted into the Congressional Record by Senator Walter Mondale (D-Minn.) as support for his "Women's Educational Equity Act," part of which would give women equity with men ir intercollegiate athletics.

Dorothy McKnight's team began its season with a victory over Guelph University of Canada, a scrimmage win at Delaware, and a close victory at Virginia Commonwealth.

Then Immaculata College, AIAW (Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women) champions the past two seasons, ventured into Cole. For three quarters, the crowd of 1100 saw a tight game, with the lead shifting back and forth. But after Donnelly fouled out early in the fourth quarter, Immaculata broke it open to win 65-52.

The subsequent loss of Rogers (sidelined with a knee injury) hurt the Terps at Western Maryland, as they blew a 12-point halftime lead to lose in overtime to the Terrors.

Cathy Calabrese and Donnelly, with 16 and 21 points each, then led the Terrapins to a 67-39 shellacking of Frostburg State at Ritchie.

Morgan State, runnerup to the Terps in 1973, then came into Cole. The Bears' record was 7-1, but Maryland's defense ran Morgan off the court en route to a 60-22 rout. Everybody saw action, including Rogers.

The Terps visited Salisbury State and easily avenged a 1973 defeat. The team continued to prepare for the all-important state tournament in March, with an eye to the regionals.

Not only was the first team winning, but the second team too. The second team Terps, made up of sophomores and freshmen, bombed their first few opponents by frightful scores. The success of the second team can be linked in some ways to the additional publicity Maryland women's basketball is receiving in area media.

"The largest snow storm since 1965 hit during finals. It took me an hour just to get out of my driveway. The radio kept listing schools that were closed, Maryland was never one of them. I guess it would have been hard on a lot of people to reschedule all those finals."

"Normally the campus looks rather dull to me, but when that snow came down the whole place took on a new and beautiful image. I know snow is hard to drive in, but I would still like to see the University look like that more often."

"A lot of us took trays from the dining hall and went sledding. It was a ball."

The Great
Gatsby

As a commuter I virtually lived out of my car. I would pack everything that I would need in a day into the car and then just go to the car two or three times in a day.

This meant I had to start for school about an hour before I needed to be there. It didn't take me that long to pack the car, it took that long to fight the traffic to school.

The first few weeks of school were spent trying to find the best route to school. It seemed that no matter what road I took, everybody else would take it too.

I tried to beat the traffic by riding a bicycle to school but I nearly died of fright on the way. Many drivers take great sport in running cyclists into curbs or parked cars it seems.

After vowing always to be courteous to people on bikes, I returned to my car. This would mean starting a little earlier but at least I felt safe.

The trip to school wasn't that bad but on some mornings it would put me in a bad mood that set the whole day going wrong. Soon I began to meet people and I was surprised to find that I was not the only one who went through this and then it didn't seem so bad after all.

"To be able to do something well is a great attribute, but to be able to teach others to do it well multiplies that greatness."

"Hopefully the overabundance of teachers will weed out the ones who are simply teaching because they don't know what else to do."

"Student teaching can be a very good or a very bad experience depending on what school you go to. But then a real teaching position can be good or bad depending on what school you go to."

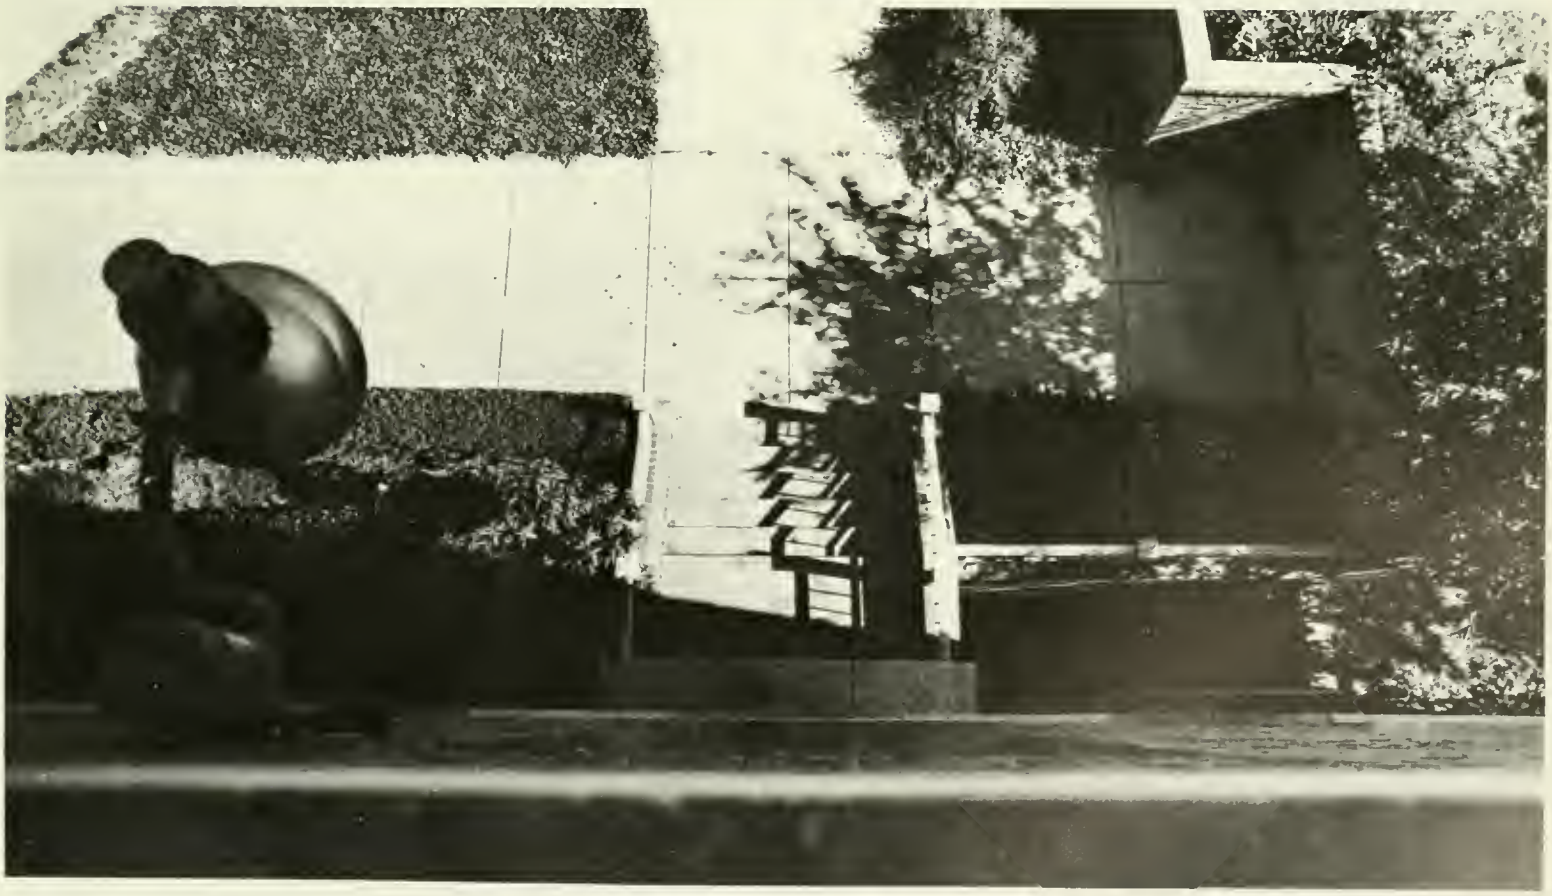
"I really don't want to talk about suicides. For all its bigness, this University is some sort of a community, and when someone dies by taking their life, it just hits harder than if it was someone in the newspaper."

"Personal stress, not academic pressure, is probably the cause of the high suicide rate among college students."

"The help center provides many services. It's manned 24 hours with people who'll rap with you about anything."

"Hotline services can do little good and perhaps some harm. Most operators although warned not to, give advice on how to solve problems. This advice rarely turns out to be right."

"The fifth floor of Denton Hall saw the first student to jump from a window."

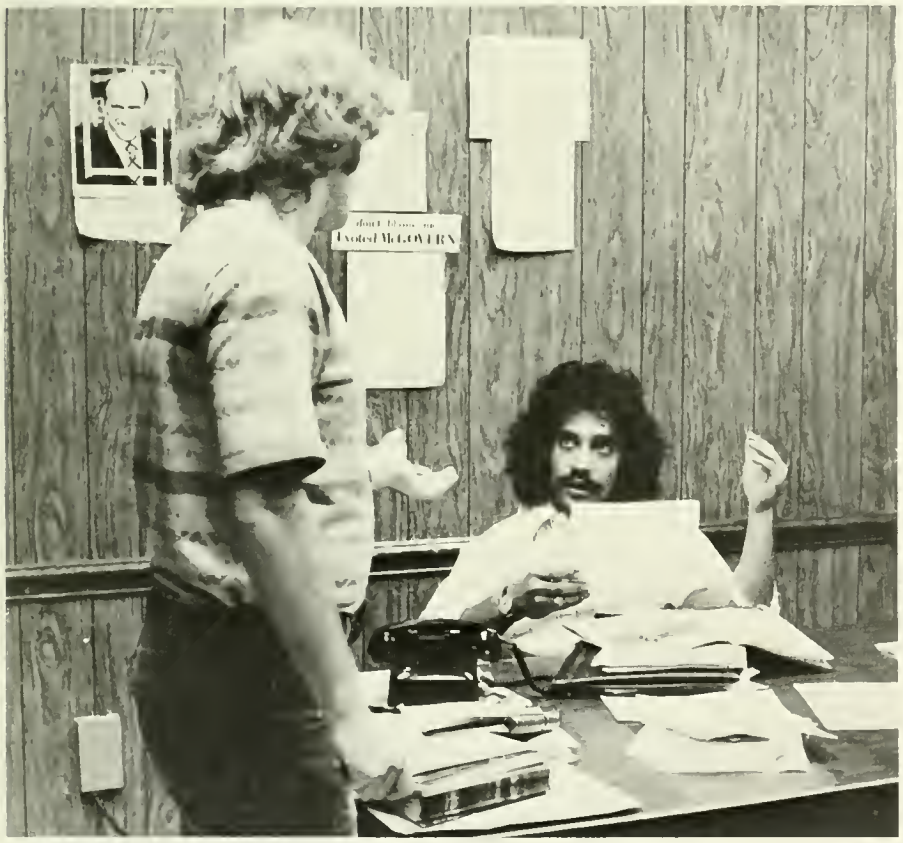


"The only help one will receive is from within one's self."

"Friends of a suicidal student should not attempt to solve his problems, but distract him and persuade him to seek professional help."

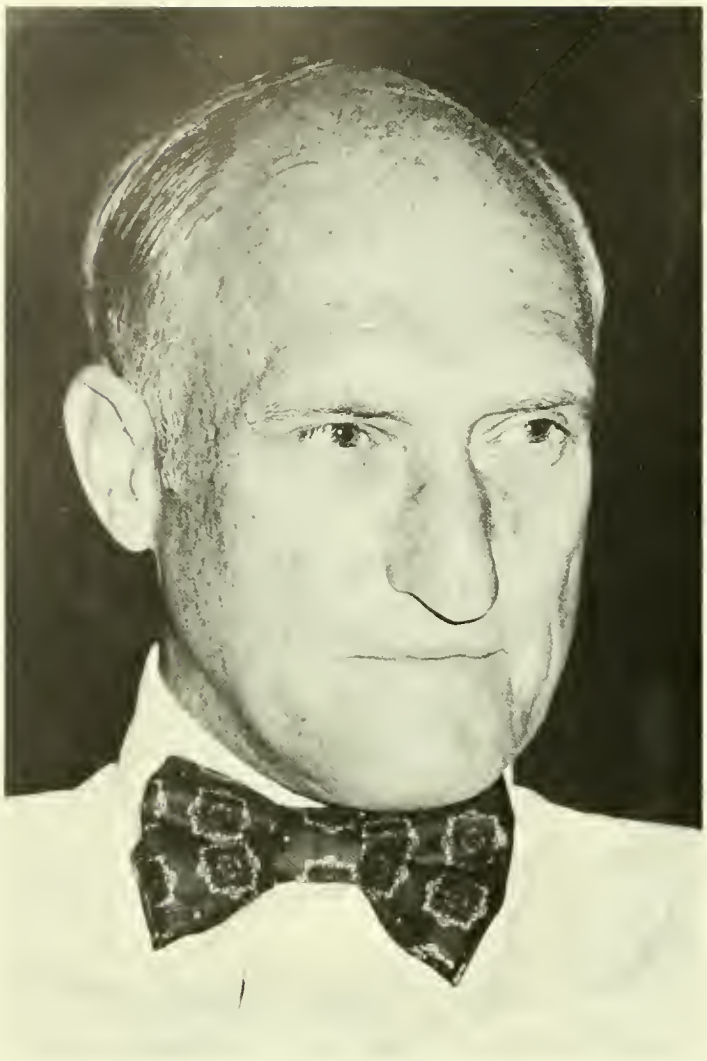
"When they start to use drugs as a method to forget their problems they only create more."

"Our philosophy has changed and we're into long-term projects—things that will benefit the students for a long time."



"SGA seems to have toned down since the Miami Convention and the stolen papers."

"I think SGA is trying real hard."



Charles E. Bishop

After four years as chancellor of the College Park Campus, Charles E. Bishop has some accomplishments to be proud of, particularly his plan of reorganization, which eliminated the old colleges of Arts and Sciences and Business and Public Administration, and substituted broad-ranging divisions in their place. "I'm striving for quality" in academics, Dr. Bishop boasts. "I want this to be the best public institution on the east coast and I think we're not far from it."

Many students, however, are disgruntled that Dr. Bishop is not as visible and open as he used to be when he arrived at the University. Bishop says he recognizes this, and plans to walk across campus and mingle with students more often.

Being only an acting vice president doesn't faze William Thomas, who was named to head the Office of Student Affairs in August after former vice chancellor Daniel L. Bratton was fired. (or "left in the middle of controversy" if you want to pussyfoot around). Dr. Thomas emphasizes the need for communication between students and the administration as the best way to eliminate campus problems. "We have to continue to find the best ways to have some kind of positive input on the campus environment so that the missions of the University can be fulfilled," he commented soon after his appointment. As a former director of resident life, Thomas views his approach to students as "candid" and sees no reason not to continue being open with students.

William Thomas

MAIN ADMINISTRATION

FOR THOSE OF YOU WHO WERE WONDERING WHO RUNS THE UNIVERSITY

Thomas B. Day

Thomas B. Day, vice chancellor for academic planning and policy, is the idea man on the College Park campus. Alone in his office, without a huge bureaucratic staff to manage, former physics professor Dr. Day thinks of new policies to make campus life more interesting and easier. This year, Dr. Day has been working on computerized requirements and issuing automatic transcripts each semester, to accompany the new computerized registration that went into effect three semesters ago. In addition, Dr. Day is busy working out the snafus that occur to thousands of students each semester, despite the computerization. Yet Day hopes that within two years, the University's Univac 1108 will have all the bugs worked out in computerized registration.

John Dorsey

Once one of the most popular economics professors at the University, Dr. John Dorsey now runs the complicated machinery needed to formulate the University budget and allocate funds. Often seen explaining the intricate budget procedures to campus groups that really don't understand how it all works, Dr. Dorsey is readily accessible to student and faculty to discuss budget procedures. Dorsey says he misses teaching, though, and would like to return to it some day.

George H. Callcott

Every inch the professor, Vice Chancellor for Academic Affairs George H. Callcott is seriously concerned about improving the University, in teaching, reasearch and library facilities. The pedagogic, bespeckled historian-turned-administrator emphasizes the need to make the University's academic reputation rival its excellent athletic ranking. "I think we've made most commendable progress in the past 20 years and in the past five years, but we still have a long way to go." says Callcott, who has been with the University almost continuously for nearly two decades. "We've not yet attained the stature that must be our goal."

"The question is not if there are any crooked politicians but if there are any honest ones left."

"I don't care what everybody else says I think Richard Nixon has done a fine job and should stay on the job."

WHEN IT'S ALL OVER

THE TIME FOR LEAVING IS SAD.

Maryland got hot, UCLA got cold, and, behind by one, the Terps fouled freshman Richard Washington with 20 seconds to go. He missed the shot, McMillen grabbed the rebound, and the Terps called time.

But it all came to naugh as John Lucas had the ball slapped from him by Dave Meye and the Uclans' Tommy Curtis recovered the ball and ran out the clock.

It was a game that everybody talked about long after the final buzzer sounded. Sports Illustrated gave the game front-page coverage. The game almost fulfilled a coach's misquote, a phrase that haunted him and his team's fans.

The game: UCLA 65, Maryland 64, December 1, 1973, at Pauley Pavilion, Los Angeles, California.

Lefty Driesell brought his Terps into L.A. hoping to achieve what most observers thought impossible—defeat John Wooden's University of California at Los Angeles basketball team.

And, after the Bruins took a 9-0 lead, even the most loyal Terrapin fan was probably conceding Keith Wilkes, Bill Walton, and company their 77th consecutive victory.

But, led by Len Elmore, Maurice Howard, and Tom McMillen, the Terps exploded for a 17-6 splurge and captured the lead 17-15.

Directly below the announcer and the Bruin coach was Howard, lying on the floor, crying. It was so painfully easy to understand why.

It was perhaps at this point that the Terps' season outlook began to change. The victories over the three nonleague opponents were all fairly easy compared to the rougher ACC, but there were moments in each when the Terrapins did not look like a team of top ten caliber.

Against North Carolina, Maryland's next opponent, such moments would be fatal, especially at Chapel Hill where the game was played.

The Terps kept pace with the Tar Heels throughout the first half, but wilted in the second half before a Carolina press and the 95-degree heat of courtside at Carmichael auditorium. As in the State game, a late rally fell short, and the Tar Heels took the contest, 82-73. The breaking of Bob Kessler's career rebound record by Len Elmore was one of the Terps' few bright spots.

For Tom McMillen, it meant never having won a game at Chapel Hill. It was ironic, for many believed he would win many games there—when he had originally made his mind up to go North Carolina.

But McMillen and the rest of the Terps shrugged off the UNC disappointment to prepare for the rematch with N.C. State at Cole.

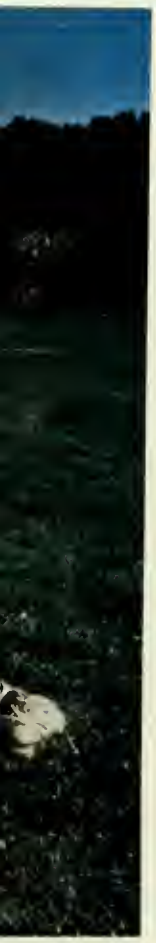
"Sometimes when I want to be alone I take a walk around the campus. The vastness is overwhelming at times and I can see how some people can feel lost, but I don't feel that. I feel at home here. I'm not lonely."

"The best thing about living in a dorm is that people are always dropping in to see you."

"I get so tied up in the social life in my dorm I seem to always be behind in my studies."

"I go to the mall to relax and get away from the masses."



"I like to go to the mall. It's a nice place to meet people."

In doing research on college yearbooks I found out that the only people who read what the Editor writes in the book are the Editors' mothers. So I would like to begin by saying "Hi Mom."

After a whole year of trying to put four years of university experiences into three hundred and four pages of a yearbook, I have realized that this is an impossible task. For each of the 36,000 students who attend Maryland, the experience is different. Even if people are stereotyped into groups, the number of groups on campus way out numbered the yearbook staff.

To make matters worse, the Student Government Association (SGA) completely cut our funds. So the first move we had to make to get closer to the student body was to double our price. (SGA has paid for most of the students portion in the past.)

Just as each Individual is different from other individuals, he is also a different person than he was when he or she first came to Maryland.

People come here knowing very few people. Some leave about the same way. Most of us though, made many friends here, and each of those friendships has had an effect on us and changed us a little.

For some the Maryland experience is a bad one. For others it is good. We all leave the university either by graduation or choice, and build upon that experience. What we have learned here should be of some help to us in the future.

Good luck in what ever that future may hold for you.
